

Five Lines of Romance

Her smile was the first light of dawn after his longest night.

When their hands touched across the table, time surrendered its relentless march.

In whispered promises, they built cathedrals of tomorrow.

Years later, he still searched for the color of her eyes in every sunset.

And in the quiet moments between heartbeats, their love remained the only language worth speaking.