Program Overview

The University of Agriculture Faisalabad provides students with access to a wide range of undergraduate programs across various disciplines including agricultural sciences, veterinary sciences, engineering, computer sciences, social sciences, and business administration. The university offers both Morning and Evening sessions to accommodate different student needs and schedules.

The fee structure typically includes higher fees for the first semester due to additional one-time charges such as admission fees, security deposits, and other initial costs. Evening programs generally have higher fee structures compared to their Morning counterparts. UAF maintains several sub-campuses throughout Punjab to make education more accessible to students from different regions. Additionally, the university welcomes international students with a standardized fee structure across all programs.

These undergraduate programs prepare students for successful careers through rigorous academic coursework, hands-on practical training, and research opportunities. UAF's commitment to excellence in education ensures that graduates possess the knowledge and skills necessary to contribute effectively to their respective fields and meet the challenges of an evolving global marketplace.
